Second "Wife" of Former Vice-Chancellor Identified by Minister
By Universal Service.
New York, Sept. 27.—Former Vice-Chancellor Merritt Lane of New Jersey will find himself in the position of a man with two wives. For Mrs. Joseph Hercht-Lane, his second wife, has declared she will not divorce him.
Dr. Clarence Hill Frank removed any doubt that might exist regarding the identity of the woman he married to "Joseph Lane" at Stamford, Conn., April 4, when he called on Mrs. Merritt Lane at her home at Carmel, N. Y. Dr. Frank was accompanied by Matthew H. Kersley, prosecutor of Fairfield county, Conn.
"I have made a positive identification of Mrs. Joseph Hercht-Lane as the woman I married," he said. "Further than that I cannot talk. It was admitted as a matter and one who might be able to help with friendly advice."
The clergyman was visibly affected as he left Mrs. Lane's home. Mrs. Hercht-Lane is said to have all but collapsed during the minister's visit.
LEGALLY SEPARATED.
Through Charles E. Kelley, Mrs. Joseph Hercht-Lane's attorney, she has admitted she is the wife of the former vice-chancellor, although Kelley conceded that under the law she could be considered legally separated.
Merritt Lane, former New Jersey vice-chancellor, remains silent. A statement issued by him gives little information other than regretting the failure of the marriage.

Let the People Themselves Say What They Want Done With the Treaty

Editor of The American:

Will you please make editorials urging that the question of this League of Nations be referred to the people to be decided by referendum vote?

Three questions should be submitted:

First, the question of ratifying the covenant as Mr. Wilson brought it over, unaltered.

Second, the question of ratifying the covenant as it shall be amended by the Senate.

Third, the question of rejecting the whole proposition and keeping entirely free from entangling alliances with European nations, according to the injunction of the Fathers.

Personally, I am in favor of this last proposition, and I think the majority of the people of the country are in favor of it. But no one knows what the majority of the people of the country are in favor of.

Mr. Wilson surely has not reached the point where he is indifferent to the will of the people and he should like to know whether the people approve of his plan or not.

The Senate also should like to know whether its amendments are indorsed by the public or not.

And the people should be given an opportunity themselves to decide whether or not they want to depart from the policy of no entangling alliances with foreign nations established by Washington, indorsed by Adams, Jefferson, Madison, Monroe, Jackson, Lincoln, Cleveland and practically all the great men of American history, but rejected by President Wilson.

Mr. Wilson asserts that eighty per cent. of the people are with him and against the senators who want to amend his treaty. Senators Johnson, Reed and Borah, who have been out among the people recently, say that the people are strongly against the treaty and in favor of the Senate opposition.

There is just as much reason to believe that the senators are right and Mr. Wilson is wrong about public sentiment as there is to believe that Mr. Wilson is right and the three senators wrong.

Mr. Wilson holds meetings which are largely attended and is liberally applauded while he speaks in favor of the treaty.

The senators hold meetings which are largely attended and are liberally applauded while they speak against the treaty.

The consensus of reports is that the crowds which greet the senators are larger and more enthusiastic than the crowds which greet Mr. Wilson.

But there is nothing decisive in all this. We see the same things occurring in every political campaign.

Speakers on both sides are welcomed by great crowds and are enthusiastically applauded.

Each partisan speaker asserts that the people are with the cause he champions.

Each private partisan is equally confident that the people take the view he takes.

Excited partisans become so convinced that the people think the way they think that they are willing to bet on it.

Mr. Wilson says he feels that way now, and would bet on public sentiment being with him, if the law would let him.

No doubt he would have plenty of takers if he actually posted his wager.

And that would not prove anything, either. Because just as many people who bet are wrong as there are others right. No matter how many persons bet, half the number win and half lose.

The fact is that nobody KNOWS what the majority of the people think about this treaty and this proposed league.

And nobody ever will know until the people vote upon the matter.

Mr. Wilson ought to see himself that his opportunities of learning popular sentiment are very few.

An unfortunate impatience with contradiction makes those who have access to him reluctant to tell him any truth he might resent, and a fondness for perfect acquiescence leads to his being chiefly surrounded by persons who are eager to tell him whatever they think he wants to be told. So he hears little that is of any value from his immediate bodyguards.

When he is on his travels he is surrounded by secret police and soldiers, and men have been knocked down and dragged off for the offense of attempting to speak to him or offering to shake hands with him. Nobody is allowed to approach him closely, except under secret police surveillance, and then only for a brief and hurried salutation.

Mr. Wilson simply does not know at all what the people think about him or about his treaty.

He has no sources of information that are of any value at all. He does not know whether the majority of the people are with him or against him.

This matter profoundly affects the people of the United States, and in any genuine democracy the people should have the right to determine by their votes what policy the nation shall pursue when their welfare and the nation's welfare are so seriously affected, and when the question of a reversal of a policy established by the wisest of our statesmen, maintained for 140 years and proven successful by the uninterrupted and unexampled growth of the nation and prosperity of the people, is at issue.

As a matter of fact the questions of making war and of making peace should rightly belong to the people themselves, and should not be delegated to any representatives, who may through vanity or arrogance or prejudice or family associations, or sectional affiliations, or racial or religious bigotries, decide such vital questions on some other basis than the best interests of the people and the greatest security and prosperity of the nation.

Furthermore, there is no wisdom as great as the collective wisdom of the people; so that not only from the point of view of the people's welfare, but from the standpoint of the greatest wisdom and the greatest good, the people can best decide these questions, and should in a genuine democracy be allowed to decide them.

We have heard a great deal about establishing democracy throughout the world, but we have seen no disposition to extend democracy here at home, to make our own institutions more democratic and more truly and immediately expressive of the will of the people.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

Neither do we.

Neither does anybody else.

We feel certain, to be sure, that a very great majority of the people are against the whole contraption of foreign entanglements.

Still we do not KNOW.

And we would like very much to know.

So would the rest of you folks. Wouldn't you?

You would, indeed.

Well, there is one way to find out—one way to settle the matter beyond dispute.

That is to refer the whole question TO A VOTE OF THE PEOPLE THEMSELVES.

Let THE PEOPLE say what they think—not Mr. Wilson or the Senators.

Let the matter be put up squarely to the people themselves.

We are not afraid of the result.

Nobody ought to be afraid of the result.

For the result, whatever it is, will be the WILL OF THE PEOPLE.

And the will of the people is the only authority which passes upon propositions that affect our national life, now and for years to come.

The excuse that there is no law providing for a referendum is an excuse only.

The Congress can order a referendum by a joint resolution whenever and as soon as it chooses to do so.

The President would not be apt to veto such a joint resolution.

And, as a matter of fact, it is within the power of any State Legislature to order a referendum election within the boundaries of its own State to determine the will of the people of that State upon this matter.

True, such a referendum vote would not be legally binding upon the senators, but nobody can doubt its moral effect. And so with the referendum which the Congress should order take. It would have no legal effect upon the power of senators to vote as they choose, but a great popular majority either way would surely have an irresistible moral effect.

If each side is so certain that the people are with it, we don't see how either can object to finding out the truth from the people themselves.

The American stands with Senators Johnson, Borah and Reed upon this matter, and the American believes that a great majority of the American people stand on the same ground and share the same views.

We are more than willing to have a vote taken—to let the people say who is right about their sentiment.

Why should the other side object if they are as sure as they say they are that the people are with them?

The Congress ought to order a referendum immediately, and the Senate should await the result of the poll.

The matter could be settled in sixty days—and that's not much time in comparison with the seven months that the debating club in Paris used up in framing this covenant in the interests of foreign nations.

DEAR K. C. B.,
IT'S ABOUT a girl.
THAT I used to write to.
WHEN I was in the navy.
AND WHEN I came back.
I CALLED to see her.
AND I fell in love.
AND SOMETHING happened.
AND WHATEVER it was.
IT WAS my fault.
AND SHE ditched me cold.
AND HUNG up the phone.
WHEN I tried to explain.
AND I've been blue.
AND WEDNESDAY night.
I READ your column.
ABOUT THE mighty good fellow.
WHO HAD the misfortune.
TO BE born a prince.
AND WHAT you said.
OF the happy memories.
OF your childhood days.
AND OF your love.
FOR THOSE who loved you.
AND TOOK care of you.
WHEN you were too young.
TO TAKE care of yourself.
AND OF the two wounds.
ON THE side of a hill.
WHERE GREEN things grew.
AND WHERE after a while.
CAME DRIFTING snow.
AND WHEN I read it.
I THOUGHT of her.
AND SAID right down.
AND WROTE her a note.
AND CUT out your column.
AND SENT it along.
AND ASKED her to read it.
AND SHE wrote right back.
ON THE very next day.
AND SAID she had read it.

AND I THOUGHT you.

Boston's Disgrace!—Pay of Her Teachers

THE teachers of Boston and Massachusetts are the poorest paid workers in the State. Kindergarten teachers in Boston receive $176 for their first year's work, after three years of training in a normal school. Unskilled laborers receive $1,892 per year from the same city of Boston, while chauffeurs, employed by the city, receive $1,248, and meter readers $1,494. This disgraceful situation has forced many teachers out of the public service.

Dr. Payson Smith, commissioner of education, and Frank Thompson, superintendent of Boston schools, express their views on this vital subject in tomorrow's Boston Sunday Advertiser. Other men and women of note take up the cudgels in behalf of the teachers.

Read the Boston Sunday Advertiser's comparative lists of salaries paid to City Hall employees and to the teachers.

The New Industrial Democracy has attracted the attention of forward-looking men in all sections of the United States. Its successful operation in a number of large stores and industrial plants in this city and State has brought in money and more money to employers and employees.

Full-page news feature of special timeliness and importance will be published in tomorrow's Boston Sunday Advertiser. Describing in detail the success of this plan of industrial democracy, which will appear in tomorrow's Boston Sunday Advertiser, will hold your attention with its record of achievement, of the results accomplished in behalf of disabled soldiers and sailors through the recent exposure of these two boards by the Boston Sunday Advertiser.

Israel Zangwill, the eminent novelist, playwright and student of humanity, has written a remarkable analysis of the League of Nations. He calls it "the League of Damnation." He says: "Had President Wilson returned home heart-broken at his defeat by the dark forces of Europe, he would have been the greatest success in history." Another of the Boston Sunday Advertiser's notable executive articles by famous writers.

Seumas MacManus, the best known Irish writer in America, continues the series of articles which is revealing the amazing conditions existing in Ireland today.

Harvard has found a means of saving money for employers, making lighter the burden of the working classes. The Harvard School of Industrial Hygiene was created to fulfill these purposes. How it has succeeded is the subject of an article appearing in tomorrow's Boston Sunday Advertiser. Laboring men, manufacturers and scientists alike will be interested in the remarkable achievements of this progressive Harvard department.

Boston University has established a school for the scientific training of young women who wish to enter the field of business. Not only will girls be taught the duties of private secretaries, but they will be fitted to fill real executive positions in industry. Tomorrow's Boston Sunday Advertiser tells the story of this new opportunity open to young women—the Boston University College of Secretarial Science.

Catholic women of Greater Boston are planning a great welcome for Cardinal Mercier, here prelate of Belgium. More than 40,000 of them will participate in the ovation to be tendered to this distinguished guest at Notre Dame. All the details of their program will be found in tomorrow's Boston Sunday Advertiser. And photographs will tell you who who in the Catholic Women's Social Register.

From cub reporter to bishop! Once upon a time there was a cub down on Newspaper Row who dreamed wondrous dreams. Some day, he said, he'd help right a wicked world. Old Boston newspaper men smiled at him. And the cub went his way. Today his dream is come true, and he is the head of a great church in America. Read the Boston Sunday Advertiser tomorrow and learn more of this remarkable churchman.
